Dr. I Wanty broth most bearing There is no to the secondary of the to the from the Palace.

Pepin of France, his sister gave,
To Greece's Emperor, great & brave;
Whose breast by jealousy inflam'd,
His guiltless Queen, disgrac'd & sham'd;
He from his Palace turn'd astray,
To seek to Krance, her lonely way.

The Bear taking one of her Children.

At length she reach'd Orleans Wood, Where faint with grief, & want of food; With sudden pains she was opprefs'd, And two fair Sons, her sight soon blefs'd; Then from the wood, came forth a Bear, Who from her breast, one Child did tear.

The King finding the other Child.

It happen'd that the King of France,
Was hunting in this wood, by chance;
When in amaze, he there did see,
A lovely babe, he near a tree;
This child he said, 'Ill take as mine,
And call the Infant, Valentine.'

Orson destroying the Travellers.

Now grown a man. In Pepin's Court,
There much prevail'd a strange report;
That a wild man in Orleans Wood,
Each haplefs Traveller made his food;
That limb from limb he them did tear,
And had been nourished by a Bear.

Whilst Valentine imparient waits:
Orson at Court, grows civiliz'd,
And in due time, he is baptiz'd.

The King's Sons endeavoring to kill Valentine.

The King's two Sons, in auger theu, Who were ambitious, envious men; Resolv'd they Valentine would kill, For gaining thus, the King's good will; But Orson freed him from their rage, For who could with his strength engage.

A Proposition of the Regulation of the con-

Green Knight.

Duke Savery was much distrefs'd, For a Green Knight had him opprefs'd; Who swore he would his daughter take, And this good Duke his captive make; Unlefs he found some Hero true, Who could this Pagan Knight subdue.

Thurst I wan giring die imgs.

To aid the Duke against his foe, Brave Valentine & Orson go; And here fair Frezon yon behold, Who gave to each a ring of Gold; And yow'd that she his wife would be, Who from the Green Knight set her free.

of Valentine & Orson.

Now the Green Kinght full well did know, Orson would work his overthrow; And therefore thought it best to be. On terms of peace and amity; A Christian true, he then became, And livd a Prince of Noble fame.

The Brazen Head declaring their birth.

The Brazen Head at length reveals,
The mystry which their birth conceals;
The twins, their virtuous Mother find,
And joy possesses every mind;
The Princes each, take beauteons wives,
And many years live happy lives.
